SECURE KEY RESET USING ENCRYPTION

ABSTRACT

A method, article of manufacture, and apparatus for securely resetting a key for accessing a computer program. In an embodiment, this comprises generating an encrypted backdoor key, providing the backdoor key to the computer program, comparing the backdoor key to a computed value, and resetting the key to a default value if the backdoor key matches the computed value.